THE JOB THAT "ISN'T THERE"

IN today's eager rush for men there is a tendency on the part of employers to call for workers before the jobs are ready. This has resulted in loss of time and money to workmen, and has crippled important war industries.

In occasional instances workers have been drawn from all over the country, and then because the employers had been premature in their recruiting, they had to tell the men—"We may need you next month."

To do away with this unnecessary shifting of men, the government has organized the U. S. employment service as a part of the department of labor. It has 500 branch offices and 20,000 U. S. public service enrollment agents covering the United States. It has definite knowledge of all manufacturing conditions and labor requirements the country over. Workmen may depend upon this government employment service, because it sends men only to jobs that are ready. It helps a man get the right job to be of greatest help to his country in helping to win the war.

The government urges every man now employed in mining to stick to his job. Shifting about is costly to all. But if a man is out of work, or if he feels that a change in employment is necessary, he is urged to consult the U. S. employment service.

To win the war the government must have maximum production in all war industries to support our army in France. Every worker wants to do all he can to help. Therefore the use of the U. S. employment service, when seeking employment, is a patriotic service and duty. Always make use of nearest office or agent.

CENSURING THE CENSOR

IT must have been a shock to the entire newspaper world to discover that in the musty and voluminous folds of the Congressional Record there was entombed a real news item of startling proportions. Nobody in the publishing business has ever dignified the Record by classifying it with newspapers but in this case the old fossilized sheet that has never had any apparent object in existing other than to print the stuff that congressmen delight to read their constituents carried the complete report of the aviation investigation. The further fact that the find was made by accident speaks vociferously of the attention paid this venerable sheet, for it was not until long after the censor had deleted the report for the use of news journals that the sensation was disclosed buried in the official proceedings of congress. The laugh is on the censor and the information bureau of the administration which was so intent on watching the daily press that no thought was given to the Congressional Record. This action places the Record in its proper class since it is an admission that the contents are seldom read and that only accident revealed the presence of the obnoxious report which the government was anxious to suppress in its nauseous details. This particular issue of the Record will become a precious addition to any private collection of monographs for it is about the only time that the paper ever possessed any value other than a record of routine proceedings. Now that the war industries board has placed an embargo on the amount of paper publishers shall use the Bonanza respectfully suggests that no harm would be done by cutting off completely the allotment of paper required for the Record. This would save thousands of tons every year and enable the industries board to treat real newspapers with greater generosity.

KEEPING AN EYE ON MEXICO

THE little fracas at Nogales shows that your Uncle Samuel is not blinded to the importance of keeping a vigilant watch on the Rio Grande border and, if it should come to a demand for reparation the United States will be found in a position to take care of its own interests without slackening in the movement of troops to Europe. While the administration has been freely criticized for maintaining so many cantonments in Texas with over half a million men in training for all divisions of the army, there seems to have been method in the madness for, without arousing suspicion of an ulterior motive the United States has been able to keep a strong fighting force within easy call of the border. In the event that any German propaganda should result in an outbreak or in increasing the tension between the two nations, this country will be Johnny on the spot and the war song of the colored cavalrymen will have a deep significance for the gang will be all there in the pink of condition, equipped as the army never was equipped before with tanks, armored automobiles, airplanes, observation balloons, gas generators and ordnance of manifold character capable of going through to the City of Mexico.

Nevertheless the situation, although serious, should not be considered critical for both nations are big enough to settle a local border dispute without resorting to a declaration of war. The United States is not going around with a chip on its shoulder waiting for an opportunity to hop on a feeble power, nor is the neighboring republic foolish enough to take umbrage at a clash provoked by the irresponsible action of an ignorant peon.

OPPORTUNITIES IN CHINA

WITH China rapidly becoming modernized and its inhabitants adopting western methods and western goods, the possibilities of trade development in that country loom up larger, it is said, than anything else on the industrial horizon. Exporters and manufacturers who are seeking a foreign outlet for their products after the war is ended realize more clearly than ever before the vast opportunity for business in this comparatively virgin field, and are establishing now the machinery for introducing their goods into China and for working up that market.

"Statistics of Chinese imports show," says the head of a large New York export commission house, "that since 1914 China's purchases of foreign products have increased by more than 1000 per cent. And, even at this great increase, the per capita expenditure on imports in China is now only about 65 cents, figured on a basis of 400,000,000 population, as compared with over $8 per capita in South America. Thus it is seen that, though the Chinese republic is already rapidly developing as a market for foreign goods, there is still bound to come an even greater increase in imports than has already taken place. There is every reason to believe that the $2,000,000,000 mark will be passed in Chinese imports in the not very far distant future, and everything favors this country getting the greater bulk of this business.

"Not only are Chinese generally better disposed toward the United States than to any other country, but no other nation will be in a position to make large investments such as are necessary to the development of new foreign markets. It is not unlikely also that this country will have after the war the largest merchant marine of any country in the world. And, more important than its aggregate total tonnage, it will be a completely rounded out merchant marine having all the various types of ships necessary for the different requirements of a great industrial nation."

CALIFORNIA FORESTS SUGAR BEET MILLS WELL PROTECTED BEGIN GRINDING

(By Associated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—Twenty-four California counties have adopted a plan for county fire protection organization suggested by the University of California, according to an announcement from the university. In these counties 412 rural fire fighting companies, made up of 6500 individuals, are now fully organized.

Part of the equipment purchased at county expense includes 532 automobile trailers, fire extinguishers, and fire fighting tools. The activity of the county organizations, the university officials state, has been a remarkable lowering of fire losses.

"The protection of food, forage and forests from fire, urged by the farm advisers of California as a war time necessity," according to a statement of Ralph P. Merrill, United States food administrator for California, "has materially helped in making it possible to ship such enormous quantities of supplies from this state to our armies and our allies."

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—Just 100 sugar beet mills in the United States are now ready to turn out sugar to furnish energy to our soldiers as soon as the harvesting of the sugar beet crop begins, according to advices received here from the United States department of agriculture.

Sixteen of the mills, with capacities ranging from a few hundred tons to 3000 tons each 24 hours, were built in 1917 to help handle the 1918 crop. Seventeen mills were built in 1918 in these states: Wyoming, Idaho, Nebraska, Utah, Oregon, Colorado, Montana, Iowa, California and Washington.

California had the first sugar beet mill in the United States. This was built in 1870.

PORTO RICO WOMEN WILL HELP WIN WAR

(By Associated Press)

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Aug. 25.—F. C. Roberts, special agent in charge of the United States employment service here, has announced that within a short time several thousand women will be registered and ready to go to the United States to help in war work.

The women, as well as the men, are being classified in such a way that particular types of workers can be supplied to meet any particular requirement. Mr. Roberts said that a considerable number of the women who are enrolled have had sufficient commercial training to make them valuable in the offices of exporting houses having business in Spanish-speaking countries.

The Sammys are said to have taken Frappe and it will be a cold day when the Fritzies get them away from it, at that.

Seems a bit difficult to make a bosom friend of one who tells the truth about you. Eh, what?

When a man has neither a dollar nor a friend he is in a sorry plight indeed.

A man who attends closely to his business usually has some business to attend to.

EL PASO SENDS A WAR LIBRARIAN TO SOLDIERS

(By Associated Press)

EL PASO, Tex., Aug. 25.—El Paso is one of the few cities in the United States to have a war librarian in the field assisting soldiers to get the kind of reading they like. The traveling librarian is Miss Ethel F. McCullough and her salary is paid by the city although she is appointed by the librarian of congress.

SOLDIERS MADE CITIZENS

(By Associated Press)

MARFA, Tex., Aug. 25.—Three hundred American soldiers became American citizens here recently when United States Commissioner Sam Kelly, of the western district of Texas, held federal court here for two days to naturalize all of the soldiers in the Big Bend military district who were not citizens.
